Un Heros Perigourdin Jean de la Jalage

Tells the story of Jean de la Jalage’s resistance at Fanlac during the Hundred Years War. The story says that Jean de la Jalage, a lieutenant of the seigneur of Auberoche, was attacked in Fanlac by the English. While fighting in the fortified church his right arm was cut off. To commemorate his bravery, the seigneur of Auberoche had a small statue of him carved into the wall of the church. The article goes on to try and pinpoint the date Fanlac was attacked.
