Study Abroad Through Drama

STUDY ABROAD

As a Drama student, there are two ways to go abroad, either through the NYU Office of Global Programs or through Tisch Special Programs. Both offices offer abroad opportunities in the Fall, Spring, and Summer Terms and both accept applications from students who are not matriculated at New York University. Drama students must complete their Primary Training and have a cumulative GPA of 3.0 in order to study abroad. Researching study abroad opportunities can begin at anytime during your career. Be sure to read the information provided on the abroad websites thoroughly and consult your advisor when planning a semester overseas.

Application deadlines for both NYU Office of Global Programs and Tisch Special Programs abroad opportunities are early in the term prior to the proposed abroad semester. Check the websites to determine exact application due dates and apply as early as possible. Popular destinations receive more applications from qualified students than they have places available.

Tisch Study Abroad

With Tisch Special Programs Drama students may take courses that fulfill Additional Professional Training, Theatre Studies, Humanities and Elective credit in many international locations over the course of the fall, spring and summer semesters, including Amsterdam, Dublin, Florence, Havana, Johannesburg, London, Paris, Prague, Shanghai, and Singapore. For program information and to apply visit http://specialprograms.tisch.nyu.edu.

Global Programs

The NYU Office of Global Programs develops and facilitates study abroad opportunities with students from all NYU schools in mind. With the NYU Office of Global Programs Drama students may take courses that fulfill Humanities, Science, Elective and, in some cases, Theatre Studies credit. In addition, there are many additional international study and exchange programs sponsored by the NYU Study Abroad Office. For program information and to apply, explore their website at http://www.nyu.edu/studyabroad.

Permission to Register Off-Campus (PROC)

There are occasions when students will wish to seek permission to take non-NYU courses abroad through another university within the country. In order to obtain permission, the course(s) should be in subject areas that are not taught at New York University. If the subject area of the course is available at New York University, students are expected to take courses in that subject at NYU. To obtain permission, you should begin by speaking with a departmental advisor. The forms are available in your department, through the Office of Student Affairs, or online at www.nyu.edu/tisch/forms.
