Brief description of report given to the society by M. Barrière on Gallo-Roman sites in the Périgord. Mentions that at Roi de la Combe, between Valojoulx and la Chapelle-Aubareil, he found what he believes is a small oppidum. There he found worked silex, bronze and iron bladelet, and pottery from the Neolithic to Gallo-Roman epochs. Its location was originally pointed out by Franck Delage.