As part of a presentation on hermits in the Périgord, president of SHAP noted the presence of a large niche in the church of Audrix and suggested it might have been the retreat of a recluse. However, M. Hardy notes that this was probably a confessional built into the stone.