ON THE VALLEY OF THE VEZERE, PERIGORD, ITS LIMESTONES, CAVES, AND PRE-HISTORIC REMAINS

"Further down the river the banks present nearly vertical sides, fluted with deep horizontal channels, excavated by frost and water in the softer bands of the Cretaceous limestones." p. 207

"That this cold condition of Southern France ceased long before the Roman Invasion of Gaul there can be no doubt, although the reindeer is passingly referred to by Caesar in connectio with the Hercynian Forest." p.209 really? check out

I would trust almost nothing this author said because he is clearly ridiculous and supposing from some very padded chair in some dark wooded office. However, it's interesting he was Lartet and Christy's editor.
